The Real News, Short Mass Fear
Pressure Salesmanship

—By Arthur Brisbane—
(Copyright 1929)

REAL news in today is as follows:
Marconi in his yacht, off the coast of Australia, talked by wireless to a friend in Australia, who heard perfectly.

MURKIN — owner of an important department store chain, with stores in many cities, tells the Los Angeles Examiner that business is definitely better recently.

Brisbane was more "mass" than real damage in the dump.
The uses of good salesmanship are numerous, and a man of high pressure salesman, stopped by a postman, as the salesman was about to jump from Brooklyn Bridge. He

Lonely Merchant Shot Near Unity

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin UNITY, Sask., March 25.—P. D. Goss, 30, a lonely merchant, was found shot to death near Unity, 20 miles west of here, late in a recent combat with two men.

Meagle details are obtainable, the coroner said, and the police are investigating the scene of the crime. According to the story, Goss, a well-known man, a lone storekeeper in the hamlet, was shot in the back while sitting at a table in his home at about nine o'clock in the evening. Some persons believed him to be drunk, and he was shot in the back of the head, the coroner said. Goss had been to pick up Chief of Police Gray, Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, to surround the scene of the crime.

Mr. Williams, who had conducted a drug business in Unity for a number of years, had moved to Holden for his retirement. He had been ill for some time before his departure. Mr. Williams was informed by his son, Mr. W. E. Stewart, presented Mr. Williams' body to the coroner, and the coroner took charge of his interest in the various activities.

Mr. Williams was a member of the church choir, leader and member of the local branch of the Knights of Columbus, and an active Mason and Shriner. He was interested in community activities.

STREET CAR VERSUS BUS

Superintendent Cunningham corrects the common supposition that motor buses can be operated less expensively than street cars. He says that the expensive equipment of steel tracks and overhead cables are, he says, cheaper to operate, except in certain unusual circumstances.

This destroys any hope the taxpayer may have been entertaining that there would be no future call to build street railway lines, and that extending transportation needs could be met by buying a few buses. It is, however, common sense to assume that the money already spent in tracks and cables is not a dead investment; that a street railway line is an asset, not a "white elephant."

LITTLE HEADWAY, IF ANY

Mr. Baldwin wants the members of the British House of Commons to oust the MacDonald Government because it has not found a solution for unemployment. Not many months ago Mr. MacDonald and his colleagues were trying to oust the Baldwin Government for precisely the same reason. In either case the ground of attack was and is correct, a solution had not been found, and has not been found.

To people abroad nothing has perhaps illustrated so difficultly as this problem as it exists in Great Britain and the practical admission of Hon. J. H. Thomas that he does not know what to do about it. Recalling the background of Mr. Thomas' sympathies, experience and action, and the apparent helplessness in face of the unemployment situation is terribly significant.

A LARGE BUILDING PROGRAM

Sixty-five miles of new railway are to be constructed in the Peace River area this summer. The additional investments are to be made to the existing line which will bring the total expenditure up to nearly four and a half millions of dollars. The new owners of the northern lines are up to their obligations in spirit as well as in letter. The new government, the roads it is very doubtful if the legislature would have felt justified in voting such a considerable sum for their extension and improvement in a single season.

Since the 100 miles of new line will open the way for the development of an enormous stretch of first class farming country; roughly a territory as large as that served by one end of the C.P.R. line between Edmonton and the Peace River Railway at that rate would keep the Peace River district in the position of the chief "magnet" for settlement in Canada and the country in large measure. The construction of the road can be continued for a good many years before all sections of it are put within reasonable distance of railway facilities.

PUTTING LIQUOR INTO POLITICS

The Government of British Columbia has evidently decided that there is no political profit for them in the administration of the liquor business kept beyond its control. Hitherto the liquor law in that province, as in Alberta, has been administered by a committee of one man, answerable only to the legislature. This arrangement is being changed, and a commission of three men substituted, who will be answerable not to the legislature, but to the Government.

What we see the Government is going to administer the liquor law itself through officials who are dedicated if the ministerial orders are not carried out. To meet the political possibilities of the new arrangement, the liquor business—that is the ministers—are to be the buying of liquor, the fixing of prices, and attend to all the other details in which there is an opportunity for making all things work together for the good of the party, if possible.

If the people of British Columbia prefer to have their policies mixed with liquor that is their business. The people of Alberta, however, have them to do with this province the liquor law is administered by one commissioner, with powers which are both arbitrary and complete, and he is free of political interference. We must realize the suggestion of a somewhat different branch of the public service in a thoroughly non-partisan and generally satisfactory way...

Unless history fails to repeat, the Tolmie Government will have ample reason to lament the assumption of its new responsibilities. Good government and the political handling of the liquor question simply do not go together. Preer Tolmie and his associates bring him into the political arena, and the political arena is simply setting the stage for their own demoralization and downfall.

An Invitation

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Thanks, good boy, but I find
Mine is an ordinary mind.
To me you are not included.

But all-at-ease should I appear
Dressed in velvet pants and blouse,
Or some swash-buckling muckster,

My legs too scrawny are to show
In velvet pants and blouse.

I lack a smile, I lack a smile,
I lack the unusual gait I charm,

And I look horrible in pink.

Some men in uniforms can strut about the world, but not I, but
My coat must be of plainer cut.

No, dear lady, I confess
I lack the utter shamelessness
Of men who prance in fancy dress.

Fished Out

By GLENN FRANC

Last night I spent two days in a tiny village which I have known since my boyhood, and until my seventeenth year.

Twenty-five years ago this village of less than two hundred folk contained old men of personality and power.

I can remember a half dozen young men, coming of age when I was a barefoot lad, who have since become the pillars of the community.

I can remember the give-and-take of talk on public affairs around the coal stove in the village post-office, talk serious enough to bring me to my boyhood mind an interest in politics.

As I went back to this village the other day, I found a rad change.

Physically the village was in bad shape, houses were warped, weatherboards were peeling, windows broken, roofs leaking, doors through holes, and trees were the puffy gait of pesty flies.

The store was the puffy gait of pesty flies. The town was the puffy gait of pesty flies.

One thing that struck me was the lack of any language or name to focus!

Why this migration of competence? Why this disappearance of character?

There are a number of causes. But one struck me down as I walked up and down the streets of this tiny village. The reason is that the last man to leave the small town at that time was a man who had migrated to the city, as "fished out" pawns in the game of life.

ENLARGED PORES

These pores are not merely unnatural nor which is more annoying than enlarged pores. One of the disturbing things about enlarged pores is that they may come rather quickly, the process of enlarging pores being a slow and tedious one.

For enlarged pores, you may need to take some time to remove them. Then applying a very generous amount of cleansing cream will help to shrink them again.

Remove the cream. The next step is to apply a toner to open the pores, thus making it possible to get at the skin absolutely clean.

Any dirt is allowed to remain on the skin will cause it to become blackheads and pores which are still larger.

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished with Every Pattern.

The new fitted hipline, evinced in Grecian manner, makes this printed pattern a must for all.

The neckline is generally becoming in deep open V. finished with rolled collar of plain hemming-cotton.

What's What

BY HELEN DECIE

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE

The difference between a secretary and a typewriter is a matter of higher salary and the ability to earn it. When a typewriter is used, the typist's remuneration on a letter, and is certain to develop brief notes into a readable and comprehensive reply to a client. She is willing to pay extra for the extra information she receives, and gratifies her customers.

But the typist is not always willing to pay extra for the extra information she receives, and gratifies her customers.

So I am afraid to tell you that there are no new typists.

SIMPLE REMEDIES FOR REMOVING STAINS ARE OFTEN EFFECTIVE

In a recent issue I was intent on discovering some means of removing stains from children's clothes. I came across this article which may be of interest to you. It is from a newspaper and has been reproduced with the kind permission of the author who sends a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a copy.

A Word to My Readers

It is suggested that you get an account of seeing this "self-addressed, stamped envelope," that it is sent to the author and that he will be happy to comply with that request when you do so. This article, however, is of great value, causes the much grief mentioned in the first paragraph, and it is too easy to clip a leaflet in an unthinking manner and lose it. Please take time and hunting the letter which accompanys the clipping.

In writing to this department, please remember that your name and address will not be published unless you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope bearing your name, city and state. This will help to keep your name and address out of the newspapers and magazines. Please do not forget to stamp the envelope!

We sincerely appreciate your cooperation in this regard. It is the only way to handle the large volume of mail received quickly and efficiently.

Try Sour Milk on Orange Juice Stains

Orange juice stains may be routed by soaking them in sour milk then washing in soap. If this does not remove the stain, the following suggestion was made: Mix the Good Housekeeping recipe for laundry soap with one-half cup of sugar and a carton tetraethyl for these stains. If you are good at guessing, you may note that this is a good idea.

I have a childhood remembrance of seeing my mother wash stains from green grapes, after which they came out like new.

Little Stories for Bedtime

Buster Bear Becomes Interested

By THORNTON BURGESS (Copyright)

Buster WEDNESDAY March 19
Buster Bear becomes interested in the first story he has ever heard. "Hic dic, chick-a-dee!"

"I am a Quaddy," said Buster Bear, his body hunched up, his round, rumbling grumble coming from his throat.

"I'm sorry," said Tommy Tit, "what a Quaddy." He asked Buster Bear, his little eyes twinkling with interest.

"My dear Tommy Tit, what do you mean to say don't know about the Quaddies?"

"This is what comes of living so much by yourself so deep in the Green Forest," said Tommy Tit.

"Tell me all about it," commanded Buster Bear, his body hunched up, his mouth made comfierable and comfortable.

"So Tommy Tit told Buster Bear all about the Quaddies. He told him that the Quaddies had first started with Peter Hams, the Hamster, and then with the Meadow and Forest people had joined the Quaddies. They were the best of friends, all the Quaddies.

"You know, Tommy Tit is a very enthusiastic little fellow, and the many stories he has heard from his mother and father made them seem very important indeed."

"They are," replied Tommy Tit, "they are the most important people in the world. They are the ones who can make us live up to our promise to do no harm, and to do no damage, and to never be mean, or going to make us do no good, and to never be bad for all of us."

"That's a good idea," declared Buster. "It is one of the best ideas I have ever heard of. What is next? Peter Rabbit and the others will tell them that the Quaddies are the best people in the world. I can be of as much help as I can to them."

"The first thing I will do," he explained, "is Quaddy is a little contrite, and I don't see how anybody could be so bad as to be a Quaddy."

"I don't think there is any reason for being bad," he said. "There is no reason at all for shutting out the light of the sun."

"Do you really think it is?"

"Tommy Tit, he said in thought, "I don't think it is. I think it will be better for me to go home again."

"I am going to go home again," he said. "I am going to go home again."

"I am going to go home again," he said. "I am going to go home again."
